
Title: Champions of a Darker Light

Author: Palladiate

I am Palladiate. I am a healer. I am a Grandmaster
Detective. I am a guildmaster. I am a rogue.
I wish to set the record straight about rogues. We are not evil, we are not puerile, we are not lacking of character.
We are champions and glorious and noble as the self-righteous
who call themselves
virtuous, and we are not so bothersome as those who follow our Lord Blackthorne in his revel of Chaos.
We do not shun the light, but as with the sun, we are not so strong as men and women to withstand the proverbial "Light"
without the proverbial
"Darkness." We
follow the Darker Light, the calling of living life to it's fullest, without bringing slaughter and ruin, even if theft, murder, pillaging, and
looting are required.
But, we are still prone to give to the less fortunate and the youngsters among the adventuring bands.
We wholly believe in kindness and goodness, but we are not perfect and we strive to be human, not godly. If we take what is not ours, it is what is not theirs, and we give what we have to those who do not have. We teach more about sharing than murderers and brigands possibly ever

can. We own the city of Occlo, so if thou dost ever see the Island of The Darker Light, seek us out, and you may find
fellowship and good
mercy.
Palladiate
Guildmaster, CDL
Grandmaster Detective